■ Since no other news medium can match television's ability to report a story as it is happening, it is ironic that television is barred from covering so many stories.

The Supreme Court has just added another brick to the wall between television and the news. It has severely limited the televising of criminal trials. The reasons expressed by a bare majority of Justices (the vote on the Billie Sol Estes case was 5-4) were that television cameras might harass the defendant and the judge; witnesses and jurors might be influenced by the knowledge that the trial was being telecast.

■ We wouldn't presume to argue the case, but we would be remiss if we did not second the view of Mr. Justice Stewart, who wrote in his dissent: "The suggestion that there are limits upon the public's right to know what goes on in the courts causes me deep concern. . . . And the proposition that nonparticipants in the trial might get the 'wrong impression' from unfettered reporting and commentary contains an invitation to censorship which I cannot accept."

In addition to the matter of criminal-court coverage, we regret the weight this decision gives Congress's refusal to admit television cameras to the House and Senate Chambers and to most committee hearings. A Supreme Court ruling recognizing television cameras as legitimate and necessary tools for covering the news in courtrooms would have weakened the Congressional position.

■ We can only hope that the question will be submitted to the Court again and that next time the Court will consider the public's right to be informed as important as the accused's discomfort in knowing that he is being seen by the public.

Television is a news medium. It must be permitted access to the news.

Well, Hello Doll-y!

Tuesday night's art class is mostly made up of theatrical people, such as Eddie Foy, below, shown handing out a lot of free but not necessarily expert advice to Ruta Lee; and below right, Nita Talbot, hard at work. And counterclockwise around Julie: Richard Deacon, Marvin Werlin, Ava Astaire (Fred's daughter and part owner of McKenzie's), Clive

Clerk and Pat Carroll (both with backs to camera), Ruta Lee, Eddie Foy, Bill Travilla, Lance Avant and Richard McKenzie, principal owner; sitting on the floor are Joe Flynn and Nita Talbot; and, gazing up at Julie, Portia Nelson.

As one may imagine, most of the theatrical types don't take this art business too seriously. Joe Flynn says he came around because his producer's wife had a piece of the place, "so he sent me over."

Pat Carroll really prefers finger painting, she says, because "I like getting gooky and messy, and besides you can imitate anybody like Picasso in his Cyclops period or Watteau in his dreamy state, just by mooshing around."

As for Julie, she signed on just for something to do after her show, My Living Doll, was canceled. One look at her, and owner Dick McKenzie asked her to step around to the other side of the easel—as what sane man wouldn't?

HOW DO YOU SPELL SUCCESS IN THREE LETTERS?

The answer is SNI, which telecasts more live sports events than the three major networks combined

BY NEIL HICKEY

Here's a question for you: What outfit televises more live sports events every year than the three major networks—ABC, CBS and NBC—combined?

Unless you're a particularly fastidious student of backstairs TV chatter, you probably have no idea. The answer is Sports Network Incorporated, a 10-year-old, little-heralded broadcast venture which is the brain-child and chattel (he owns 98 percent of the stock) of a gentle, good-humored, incredibly low-keyed and rich fellow named Richard E. Bailey.

In 1956, Bailey was a successful TV executive—network coordinator for ABC—with seven children and a home in New Jersey. As a sports buff, he discerned a yawning gap in the networks' coverage of American sporting events: Great segments of the TV audience were going begging, and the costs to advertisers and TV stations of beaming regional sports were far higher than they needed to be.

Bailey convinced all 16 major-league baseball teams that he could handle the televising of their away-from-home games: He'd simply link up a chain of TV (and radio) stations near each team's home city, and beam the games back to this expanded audience, thereby spreading the costs to advertisers, and also adding to each team's revenue.

They all bought it. ("Turning over those important rights to me—a one-man operation—was a real risk for them; but I wasn't going to tell them that," Bailey recalls.) He quit ABC, moved into some borrowed office space and began telephoning to line up air time and sponsors.

That first year, Sports Network Incorporated (SNI) did $900,000 worth of business, without owning a single camera. (They rented equipment in all the major-league cities.) This year, the estimated volume is $10,000,000, and the company owns $4,000,000 worth of mobile studios, color cameras, creepie-peepies and processing equipment.

Four hundred baseball games a season are handled for major league clubs, and a combination of more than 2000 broadcasts of TV and radio games are carried by more than 300 stations throughout the baseball season.

Bailey and his boys—he has some 90 regular employees, boosted to 200 during baseball season—have covered 5000 sporting events since 1956: horse racing, tennis, track, bowling, basketball, swimming, skiing, hockey, football. They've hired an impressive crew of sportscasters, including Jimmy Demaret and Jack Drees for golf, Sammy Renick for horse racing, Jack Kramer for tennis and Chuck Ferries for skiing.

One of the plumpest grapes in SNI's basket is this year's PGA National Tour. It has purchased the rights to televise 13 tournaments—for $750,000. The golf matches are currently being seen in an average of 150 U.S. markets.

The whole "free-lance" network business—buying rights to special events, then finding sponsorship for them and lining up stations to carry them—is not unique to SNI. An outfit called Sports Television, owned by one Castleman deTolly Chesley in Whitford-Exton, Pa., has been doing it on a smaller scale since 1957, when it presented Atlantic Coast Conference basketball and football, and NCAA Eastern Regional basketball tournaments.

Chesley personally packages and produces his events. This fall he will tape the Army football games for delayed broadcasting. He has also offered live golf and exhibition pro football games.

Last year, a California outfit called The Fourth Network entered the high bid—$50,000—for the Palm Springs Golf Classic, then persuaded 121 TV stations (all but seven of them affiliated with a network) to broadcast it. John Vrba, The Fourth Network's founder, claimed at the time that the way to the hearts of all those station-owners was a purely economic one: "It was a simple matter of paying them more for their time than the networks."

'You mean there isn't anybody to tell you what is going on?'

work appears to have pulled in its horns a bit, and—in the sports area—is offering only Canadian pro football; not, however, on a live basis.

That leaves SNI as the most energetic and successful of the free-lance networks. As a privately owned company, it makes no public statement of earnings. (Bailey has given away 2 percent of the business to employees.) "We don't like to call attention to the amount of business we do," Bailey said the other day. "It's healthier that way. It might wake the big networks up to what we're doing, and build competition for the events we're trying to get."

What do 'real' networks think?

What, in fact, do the "real" networks think about this upstart in their terrain? A CBS spokesman said: "SNI normally doesn't conflict with us. They specialize in regional-appeal events, although they have gone national on some, such as PGA golf and the National Indoor Tennis Championship from Salisbury, Md. Usually, the events we bid on, they don't, and vice versa. When it comes to a face-down, however, SNI can't bid competitively with us. They can't afford to risk a loss on some of these big events. We can."

An NBC executive says: "There are areas where we're competitive with SNI, and others where we're compatible. When Dick Bailey puts together a PGA tour, as he's done this year, we're competitive with him because many of the stations affiliated with our network may elect to carry his golf matches instead of what we're putting out.

"We're competitive also in bidding. Both he and NBC bid on the NCAA swimming and diving championships this year, for example. We were lucky enough to get the rights. The last time NCAA football was up for bids, SNI offered $10,600,000, and we got it for $13,000,000."

But there are many areas of compatibility, said NBC's man. "Bailey has a tremendous investment in technical equipment. He's probably the largest owner of mobile units in the country. So we frequently lease his equipment when there's more going on in a single day than our own units can handle."

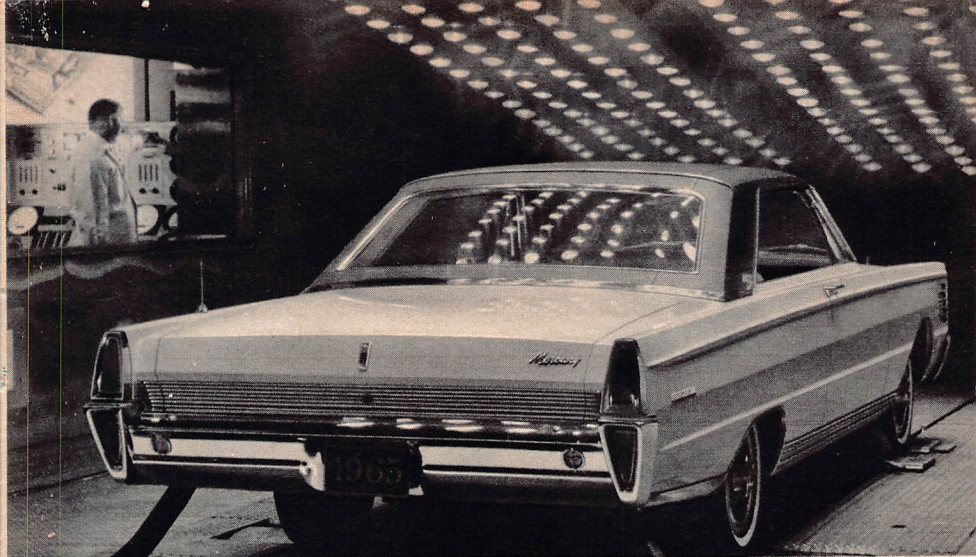

High praise from TV critics

This spring SNI won high praise from sports-minded TV critics when it carried the entire two hours and 35 minutes of a golf match from Pensacola, Fla. Doug Sanders defeated Jack Nicklaus in a sudden-death, three-extra-hole play-off which took the show 65 minutes overtime. Sanders sank a sensational 35-foot putt to win the match, giving TV golf fans one of their most exciting moments in years. The match was carried by 150 stations. Only 10 cut away during the extended overtime. But several of those resumed broadcasting the show when they began to suspect that an extraordinary finish was in the making.

Without question, SNI is one of the most remarkable success stories in the television industry, thanks mostly to the imagination of Dick Bailey in discerning the need for it, and then his drive and determination in creating it out of thin air.

"In the next few years," he told us, "with the coming of UHF, there will be a greater and greater need for sports on television. UHF will allow sports promoters to schedule more events at night, to run live events which would never break through the prime-time schedule of the major networks. Also, I can foresee all-sports TV stations, just as we now have some all-news radio stations."

He talks big, but TV people in the know have learned to listen. After all, nothing speaks louder than success.

THE DAY THE NAZIS LANDED

(in Portuguese Bend, Cal.)

BY JOHN GREGORY DUNNE

So you'd like to have a television show made at your house. You think it would put you one up on your neighbors. And make you palsy with a lot of movie stars. Not to mention rich, since everyone knows those movie companies spend money as if it came from a Monopoly set.

That's what I thought the day Universal Pictures called to say they wanted to rent our house and beach in Portuguese Bend, Cal., for a Bob Hope's Chrysler Theater segment called "Escape into Jeopardy." I was practically beside myself, particularly when they intimated that the house would be a villa in the south of France. I felt like the owner of that palace in Marienbad.

Until I mentioned it to my wife's cousin Iris.

"A villa in the south of France?" Iris sounded doubtful. "Wasn't your house a motel once on Perry Mason?"

"That's right, Iris."

"And a garage on The Untouchables?"

"That's right, Iris."

"A step up in class, isn't it?"

I allowed that it might be.

"How much you getting?"

"Three hundred."

"They saw you coming. My brother-in-law George got $750 for his house once. Of course, his place is showier than yours."

George must have quite a place. Our house looks like a medieval battlement. It is dominated by a 50-foot-high stone tower, through which the driveway runs. A huge oak gate, topped by 18 fleur-de-lis-shaped iron spikes, shuts out the outside world. On either side of the tower and its gate stands a gatehouse, and the 3-foot-thick walls of the two gatehouses form the outer wall of the estate. After the 1929 Crash halted construction of what was to be the main house, out on a promontory jutting into the Pacific, the gatehouses were converted into the main living quarters. My wife and I live in one, our landlord and his wife in the other. Outside our bedroom window are a pergola and a formal box garden and, beyond that, a rose garden where, among the roses, lie eight marble pillars, each weighing two tons and all imported from Italy in the late 1920's to be used as the portico for the main house. The effect is that of a Mediterranean Manderley, and I dare George to top it.

Anyway, not everyone was as jaded as Iris. Apparently the neighbors thought we were going to feed cast and crew, for in the space of a few days we were offered seven cakes, 11 batches of brownies, three hams, and one roast turkey. The telephone company called to see whether we wanted a trunk line installed, and, after the Chrysler people said that they wanted to level and widen the dirt road to the beach, sealed bids began arriving from construction companies all over Los Angeles County. Friends in Beverly Hills, which is some 40 miles away, called to say that it just so happened that they would be in the neighborhood that day and had thought they might stop by with the kids. Even the local police department got into the act. They announced that they would assign an off-duty patrolman to control the expected heavy flow of extra traffic. They added that they would bill us for his off-duty pay.

Still, I was determined to be a good host, and asked Universal Studios to send me out a script of the show. It was that chestnut about the convict who is sprung from prison during World War II to do a top-secret job for the O.S.S. Once his special talents have been utilized, he is to get his freedom—only the Gestapo, as you will remember, always guns him down just before the fade-out. You might have thought the script was the Rosetta stone for the scrutiny I gave it. I wandered around the house, murmuring portentously: "War is a time of dark journeys and no man—at the beginning—can hope to know his final destination."

"What's that?" my wife asked.

"The narration," I replied.

"Sounds tendentious."

"You mean sententious."

"I mean both."

I have learned to ignore my wife when she is making like Nora Charles, and so ransacked my memory for stray fragments of information about the star of the show, James Franciscus, the old Jefferson High dropout. Just in case I got a chance to strike up a conversation. Yale '57, I knew, and jotted down the names of some other Yale '57's of whom I had heard over the years: Long Weekend Schaeffer, H-Bomb Dennison, Living Legend Mankowski, and the football captain, Mightiest of the Mighty Mike Oweicek. "Franciscus' nickname is 'Goey,'" I informed my wife. "Goy?" she replied incredulously. "Go-ey," I said firmly.

Unlock the gate at 4:30 A.M.

The night before filming began, we got a call from Universal. Would I mind unlocking the gate for the trucks in the morning, first thing? Not at all. What time was first thing? 4:30 A.M.

I managed to get up at 4:15, and by 4:20 or so had worked up a vivid dislike for everyone connected with Universal Pictures, up to and including Lew Wasserman, the president. Promptly at 4:25, the first truck arrived. By the time 10 more, and nearly 100 men, had rolled through the gate, it began to dawn on me that this operation was going to bear some resemblance to the Normandy invasion. The first casualty was a cat (there are 10 on the place); it hopped into the generator truck and got a shock that retired it from the rest of the day's action. Outside, one of the grips installed a road sign reading: "CANNES 14 KM." A passing motorist, trying to work this puzzle out, clipped our mailbox in two. That was at 5:50 A.M.

' . . . a Nazi In the pergola '

At 6, my wife woke up and screamed: "There's a Nazi in the pergola." Indeed there was, and he was staring into our bedroom window. In the rose garden, a platoon of Wehrmacht soldaten practiced close-order drill. "Ein, zwei, drei, vier." "How does one join the Resistance?" my wife muttered, not being what you would call a good sport in the morning. Outside, a motorcycle and sidecar careened up and down the beach road and, in front of the house, another German soldier tried to master the intricacies of a Mercedes staff car. He drove forward into the hedge, then backward into the geraniums. About that time our gamecock, Buck, a high-strung bird who regards the garden as his own fief, flew up and began scratching the central-casting Nazi about the ankles. "That," said my wife, "is one for our side."

Later, I drove down to the beach to watch Franciscus film a love scene with his co-star, a starlet named Jocelyn "Jackie" Lane. The scene called for Franciscus to eat some salami, and, after every clinch, he complained about the possibility of gastritis. Offering him a Rolaid, I murmured, "H-Bomb Dennison." "Thanks, Dennison," he replied enigmatically.

By that time Jocelyn "Jackie" Lane, who was cast as a Resistance heroine, had changed into a bathing suit. The director threw a pail of water on her to wet her down and a German soldier, who had been sitting idly by perusing Nugget, roused himself to shout: "Pour it down her front!"

Back at the house, another crisis. We had run out of milk (10 children, with assorted mothers, had arrived for the day), and the studio trucks blocked all exits to the highway. Someone, in fact, had driven my car out into a field on the farthest reaches of the point, and I made the mistake of complaining. "I don't believe, buddy," I was told, "that there were any poppy-red Mustang convertibles on the Riviera in the summer of 1943."

Meanwhile, deprived of their milk, two children started a fight and knocked over one of the studio lights. Two others flatly refused to touch their egg-salad sandwiches—the menu for the day—and a third demanded an Awful-Awful (I have yet to discover exactly what this delicacy is). And one mother complained every 10 minutes or so that she had never heard of Jocelyn "Jackie" Lane. Somehow this seemed a reflection on us, and indeed on our whole way of life. It is no wonder that, when character actor Werner Klemperer, dressed as a Nazi colonel, came to the back door for a glass of water, my wife looked him in the eye and said, "I'm glad they've extended the statute of limitations on Nazi war crimes."

And so the day went. Franciscus finished his scenes early and departed for Universal, thus disappointing a contingent of local schoolteachers who arrived—unannounced—for the express purpose of having their pictures taken with him. They gave me the distinct feeling that if I had a son, he'd be flunking the new math for that gaffe. And next day one of the visiting mothers, she who had never heard of Jocelyn "Jackie" Lane, called to say that her son had cracked his ribs when he fell out of "your tree." Guess who's held responsible. It seems that under the law a movie company on your property comes under the heading of "an attractive nuisance." Agreed.

REVIEW

by Cleveland Amory

Walt Disney

We are spending a large portion of this summer directing an exhibit for the benefit of the Humane Society of the U.S. at, of all places, the "Better Living Center" at the World's Fair. And since our exhibit consists of a large number of better living live animals, the question we are most frequently asked, by TV GUIDE readers from all over the country, is what do we think of Walt Disney?

Frankly, reviewing Walt Disney is like reviewing the Grand Canyon. Including, we might add, the concessions. For Walt is nothing if not commercial. Everything he does seems to be made into a movie and at least one television show—often several—plus an inordinate number of repeats—until, honestly, watching a Disney show you actually lose all track of time. You know you've seen it, but whether as a movie, a television program, a nursery rhyme, you just can't be sure. You can, however, bet on one thing. Whatever it was, Mr. Disney managed to get it sponsored and at the same time get the sponsor to plug, with every part, the latest Disney film. And then finally, as a special favor apparently, he allows his sponsor to present, once a year, a program devoted to a Disney anniversary—either Disney's or a Disney character's or, perhaps, Disneyland's.

It would all be too much—were it not for the simple fact that Mr.

Disney's programs are almost always good and, more often than not, great. And therefore he can be forgiven a great deal, even an occasional program which does not come up to snuff. One of these, incidentally, was in our opinion his "Alice in Wonderland"—it was so hoked up with Broadway musical-comedy numbers that Alice wasn't the only one who got lost—so did Lewis Carroll.

Usually Disney has four main types of program—cartoons (of which he hasn't done many this season), adventure stories, historical programs and nature studies. These last are, curiously, to many people, controversial. Mr. Disney likes animals, but at the same time, his programs do have scenes in the shooting of which animals seem to be, if not killed, at least seriously hurt. It would be too much—if it were not for the simple fact that Mr. Disney has undoubtedly done more for humane education—by making individual animals not only famous but also lovable—than any other person in modern times.

When it comes to his adventure stories, our only criticism is their length. Three or even four parts are nothing for Mr. Disney—still we have yet to see one which could not be done in at least one part less if Mr. Disney would only cut down on his introductions, teasers, trailers, etc. Of his historical programs we liked best the remarkably exciting two-parter on Hans Brinker, and the swashbuckling Robin Hood. In this latter program Mr. Disney told us at the beginning that, despite all his researches, he found Robin Hood to be "still a mystery man, half truth, half legend." And, he added, "This is part of his ageless appeal."

Half truth and half legend is a part too—or maybe even Parts 3 and 4—of Mr. Disney's appeal, and his appeal too is ageless. For young and for old, as well as, we hope, forever.

FOR THE RECORD

Northern California Edition

What Happened, Baby? To most adult viewers the CBS special called "It's What's Happening, Baby!"—an interminable procession of "recording artists" pretending they know how to sing—was a drag, baby, a screeching bore. To some postadolescents in Washington, however, the show was more than just tedious—it was "shameful," "depraved" and "immoral." That's what several Republican senators called it. Their target was not Murray the K, who emceed the show, but Sargent the S, whose Office of Economic Opportunity launched the program as a well-intentioned effort to capture the attention of high school drop-outs and get them off the streets. "Sargent Shriver and his people" insulted the intelligence of the public, said Sen. Gordon Allott (R., Colo.), the most vociferous complainant. The show, he said, "made me want to regurgitate."

Emmy Nominees: The Emmy Awards, streamlined as a result of last year's two-network boycott, now are designed to reward "outstanding achievements," with nominees chosen by "highly qualified members" of the TV academy, and winners selected by "blue-ribbon panelists." This year's nominees, in three major categories:

Entertainment Programs: The Andy Williams Show, The Bob Hope Chrysler Theatre, The Dick Van Dyke Show, Hallmark Hall of Fame, The Man for U.N.C.L.E., Mr. Novak, "My Name Is Barbra" (Barbra Streisand special), Profiles in Courage, The Defenders, "The Magnificent Yankee" (Hallmark), Walt Disney, "What Is a Sonata?" (Young People's Concerts), "The Wonderful World of Burlesque" (Danny Thomas special), Xerox's UN specials.

Entertainment Performers: Julie Andrews, Leonard Bernstein, Johnny Carson, Gladys Cooper, Robert Coote, Richard Crenna, Lynn Fontanne, Julie Harris, Bob Hope, Dean Jagger, Danny Kaye, Alfred Lunt, David McCallum, Red Skelton, Barbra Streisand, Dick Van Dyke.

News Programs: "My Childhood," NBC's convention coverage, "The Louvre," "The Decision to Drop the Bomb," "I, Leonardo da Vinci."

Any number of these nominees may win Emmys, at the discretion of the judges. No CBS News productions have been nominated because the network's news chief, Fred W. Friendly, disapproves of the award setup and refused to let selectors screen any of his department's programs. The winners will be announced Sept. 12, during the Emmy telecast, on NBC.

Sweeping the Floor: Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower would like to see TV cameras and reporters barred from the floor of political conventions. "We don't want them running around interviewing people when matters are being discussed on the platform," he told a Republican National Committee meeting last week. CBS newsman Walter Cronkite made a similar proposal several months ago, but the Cronkite Doctrine has not attracted much support at the networks. —Henry Harding

TV GUIDE of July 3, 1965, carried an article by Edith Efron concerning FCC policies relating to programming ["He Has Seen Pig Pens Better Run"]. The theme of the article is that I am seeking to persuade the Commission that the First Amendment limits FCC authority to regulate programming. This is quite correct and the substance of quotations attributed to me on this subject is accurate. However, somehow a comment crept in which suggested I had made a comparison between the operating efficiency of the Broadcast Bureau and one of the functional units of a farm. This is most unfortunate, and it is particularly unfortunate that this phrase should have been used as a headline or title for the article. I do not recollect having said this; and surely if I said anything like it, I was smiling. Even the courts have recognized that ostensible epithets and hyperbole are not insults if uttered facetiously and with a smile. I suggest that the headline on Miss Efron's article is unfair to her, to me and to the Broadcast Bureau. The article was a serious report on an important issue. There are genuine differences of

5:00 7 7 11 13 WIDE WORLD OF SPORTS

Scheduled: the final round of the 105th British Open, which was taped yesterday at the Royal Birkdale Golf Club, Southport, England, and the Daytona (Fla.) Firecracker 400 Stock-Car Championship.

The British Open has a small purse ($28,000), but it ranks alongside the U.S. Open, PGA and Masters as one of golf's Big Four. Among the entrants: defending champ Tony Lema, Gary Player, Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Kel Nagle and Sam Snead. Only three golfers have won the Big Four: Player, Gene Sarazen and Ben Hogan. Nicklaus needs a British Open win to become the fourth.

The wind-swept Royal Birkdale is a typical British seaside course, dotted with large sand hills, willow-scrub roughs and many traps. Jim McKay covers the action on the par-73, 7037-yard course.

Tony Lema, defending champion.

Bill Flemming and Chris Economaki report the Firecracker 400, taped July 4. Among the drivers were defending champ A. J. Foyt and Junior Johnson.

Writer Sarah Patton Boyle describes herself as being "as close to a typical Southern lady as anyone ever is . . ." Born and raised in the Virginia society referred to as the "Southern aristocracy," Mrs. Boyle's experiences with desegregation were gradual. This account of her experiences is the second in the four-part series examining the civil-rights struggle.

In an adaptation of her autobiographical book, Mrs. Boyle tells of the circumstances that led her, at age 45, to take a stand against the white South—at which time it was noted that she was "the only outspoken white integrationist in Virginia."

In the years that followed, Southern editorial pages have demanded that Mrs. Boyle leave the South and crosses have been burned on her lawn. However, she still maintains "The Negro's battle for equality is just. This is his country and he wants only . . . to share it equally."

■ END MONEY PROBLEMS—CONSOLIDATE

It makes good sense to arrange for a Homeowner loan to pay all your bills and installment loans. Then, instead of making many big payments each month, you'll have just one lower monthly payment—chances are it will be less than half of what you are now paying, because home loan payments are lower than those available through most any other loan.

■ MONEY FOR ANY REASON

THESE LOW PAYMENTS	BORROW	REPAY
REPAY	2,000..	30.00
YOUR LOAN	3,000..	45.00
IN FULL	4,000..	60.00

8:00 6 9:00 9 MEN OF OUR TIME

SPECIAL The life of Vladimir Ilyich Ulyanov—Lenin—spans one of the most volatile and significant periods in modern European history. This film chronicles his career and the impact his ideas have made on our world.

A rare combination of intellectual and man of action, Lenin became a dedicated revolutionary early in life. His theories crystallized at the age of 17 after his older brother Alexander was executed for his political activities.

James Cameron narrates films covering Lenin's early days as a law student and student of Marx, his drive to organize the professional revolutionaries who would bring socialism to Russia, and his years of exile and imprisonment. The rush of events that led to the realization of his dream is covered: the abortive revolt of 1905, the February Revolution of 1917, the abdication of Czar Nicholas, Lenin's

Why does man seem so similar to the ape? Why do ancient rocks contain imprints of creatures now extinct? What causes giants, dwarfs, albinos? A little over a century ago, no one really knew.

Then an English biologist, Charles Darwin, published one of the most important books in history. The first 1,250 copies of his The Origin of Species sold out in a day, and a storm of controversy broke which has never entirely died.

Now here at last—in the style that LIFE has made famous, so that it makes perfect sense even to school children—is the remarkable story of evolution in this beautiful introductory volume of the LIFE Nature Library.

You retrace the historic voyage that young Darwin made on H.M.S. Beagle, and see the very same phenomena that set his mind ablaze. You see the primitive Indians of Tierra del Fuego, at the bottom of the world, so tough they sleep naked on icy ground. You tour the Galápagos Islands, Nature's own laboratory of evolution, where complete isolation from the rest of the world has resulted in startling species never seen anywhere else.

You see the clues to bygone life—shells, bones, tracks, eggs, imprints or entire mummies—preserved by Nature in tar, coal, ice, and stone. You see a frozen baby mammoth perfectly preserved in Arctic ice for 22,000 years. You share the thrill of the couple in Tanganyika as they uncover the bones of the world's earliest known man—over a million years old!

Genetic scientists take you into their laboratories to explain the mysteries of the microscopic genes and chromosomes that determine the inheritance of characteristics. You see a human egg magnified 2,000 times. How a living cell divides.

Obviously so vast and exciting a book cannot be adequately described here. So we invite you to borrow a copy from us for 10 days. Then if you wish you may return it and owe nothing. Or you may own it for much less than such an expensively printed and handsomely bound book would ordinarily cost. Thanks to TIME-LIFE's vast facilities and large print orders, you pay only $3.95 (plus shipping and handling). Then you will be entitled to receive another volume of the LIFE Nature Library for free examination every two months.

But you make no commitments, promise to buy nothing. And you may cancel this arrangement any time you wish. However, the entire series makes an impressive encyclopedia of Nature that your family will increasingly treasure—a superb reference shelf and study aid used in thousands of classrooms from elementary school through college. To examine the first volume without obligation, simply mail the postpaid reply reservation form.

GORILLA

The 2 billion year evolution of man can now be traced from fossil remains of past species.

The Red-tailed Tropicbird, San Cristobal Island, Galapagos. It is the only bird on the island that has a red tail.

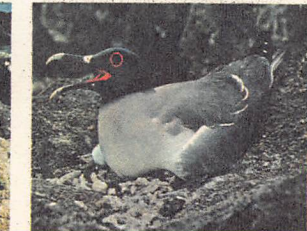

The Black-footed Albatross is the only bird on the island that has a black foot.

Birds That Know No Fear

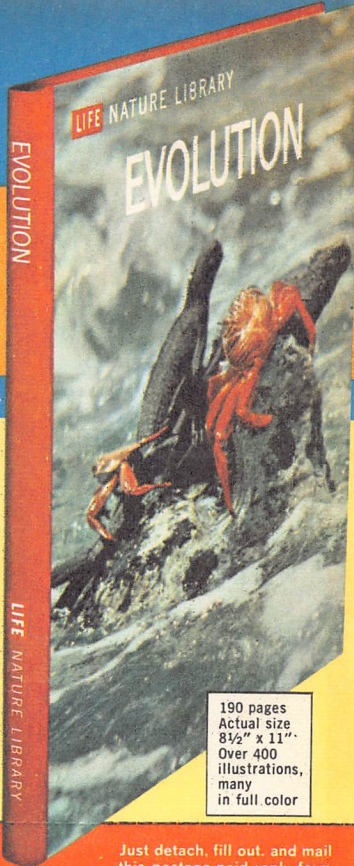

The odd birds on these pages fear all natural dangers and all predators. In fact, they will tolerate the presence of man. Some are almost tame, but others are wild and fierce. They are all birds that know no fear and live on the isolated Galapagos Islands. They are the only birds that have been described in scientific books. The only birds that have been described in scientific books.

The Red-footed Booby is the only bird on the island that has a red foot.

THE STRANGE RESULTS OF SECLUSION. On the isolated Galapagos Islands, Darwin was amazed to find birds unlike any others in the world. These odd new birds led him to question the "stability of species."

10:45 3 4 7 8 ALL-STAR GAME

SPECIAL COLOR The 36th All-Star Game between the National and American leagues is telecast from Bloomington, Minn., home of the Minnesota Twins. Joe Garagiola and Jack Buck report.

Last year, the National League won, deadlocking the series at 17-17 (there was one tie). This year, the Nationals are piloted by Philadelphia Phillies manager Gene Mauch. Al Lopez of the Chicago White Sox manages the Americans.

For the first time in the game's history, no New York Yankee is on the American League's starting team. The American League starters . . . Catcher: Earl Battey (Minnesota). First base: Bill Skowron (Chicago). Second base: Felix Mantilla (Boston). Third base: Brooks Robinson (Baltimore). Shortstop: Dick McAuliffe (Detroit). Left field: Willie Horton (Detroit). Center field: Vic Davalillo (Cleveland). Right field: Rocky Colavito (Cleveland).

Gene Mauch

Al Lopez

At press time, the National League's starting lineup had not been announced. The starters are determined by ballots cast by each team, including managers and coaches, a procedure adopted in 1958. Until then, fans had voted for their favorite players. Among the players expected to be on the National League team are: catcher Joe Torre (Milwaukee); infielders Gordon Coleman (Cincinnati), Pete Rose (Cincinnati), Richie Allen (Philadelphia) and Cookie Rojas (Philadelphia); and outfielders Ron Fairly (Los Angeles), Willie Mays (San Francisco) and Hank Aaron (Milwaukee).

CREATIVE PERSON—Sean O'Casey

These dramatized excerpts from the works of Sean O'Casey set out to capture the vitality and sensitivity of one of Ireland's finest writers.

Born in Dublin in crushing poverty, last in a family of 13 children (of whom only five survived), O'Casey spent much of his life at manual labor. His first success—the production of "The Shadow of a Gunman" at the Abbey Theater—came at the age of 39.

Through his early works run two important themes: the tragic series of bloody "risings" against British domination, in which so many of Ireland's young men were killed; and the courage and nobility of Irish womanhood, which gave stability and strength to a land confused and weakened by bloodshed.

The excerpts from O'Casey's essays and autobiography display his stinging wit and sparks of good humor. The brief readings from his early plays contain the flashes of fire and majesty characteristic of his rugged, rough-hewn work.

Anne Meara and Dermot McNamara

Folk singer Liam Clancy sings and narrates. Dermot McNamara plays O'Casey, and Carmen Mathews, Anne Meara and Fred Scollay play multiple roles.

Produced by Virginia Kassel. John J. Desmond directed from a script by Joseph Hurley.

Age 8 (1925)

Choate (1934)

England (1938)

Navy lieutenant (1943)

SPECIAL For this 60-minute film chronicling the life of John F. Kennedy, producer Allan Jay Friedman composed original folk-type music, with lyrics by Academy Award-winner Paul Francis Webster (Lyrics, "Love Is a Many-Splendored Thing") to supplement actor Joseph Cotten's spoken narration.

The Kingston Trio, the Mormon Tabernacle Choir and Gordon MacRae perform the musical narrative as stills, news film and rare footage gleaned from the Kennedy family and friends trace the former President's career.

With emphasis on lesser-known aspects of his youth, the program shows the early Kennedy years from his birth in Boston, May 29, 1917, through school days at Dexter, Choate and Harvard; his life as an ambassador's son; his Navy career; his move into politics first as a congressman, then as a senator; his marriage to Jacqueline Bouvier; the birth of their first child; his unsuccessful drive for the 1956 Presidential nomination; his nomination and election in 1960; and the White House years.

Written by Stephen Longstreet.

'MARS CLOSEUP: ARE WE ALONE?'

Mars, our nearest neighbor planet (at one point in its orbit, it comes as close as 35,000,000 miles), has long been the subject of speculation. The big question: Does it support life—animal or vegetable, intelligent or nonintelligent?

Last November, the U.S. Mariner IV was launched on a "fly-past" to the red planet, equipped with cameras and instruments designed to send back photos of the planet's surface and information about such things as the composition of its atmosphere. Today is the day that Mariner IV should start sending its signals.

ABC science editor Jules Bergman interviews William Pickering, director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, the group collecting data being sent by the spacecraft; astronomer Frank Drake; and Dr. Cyril Ponnampetuma of Ames Research Laboratories. They discuss the possibilities of opinion on this issue and Miss Efron has competently presented my view regarding the First Amendment. The headline on the article is irrelevant to the issue and grossly misleading as to the nature of the article. It seems to me that this effort to sensationalize has done a disservice to the view which I hold and which Miss Efron was seeking to present to your readers. At this time all I can do is to record this unhappy protest and ask you to convey it to readers of the article.

GOOD QUESTION

Stan Freberg's concern for the mass TV audience ["Drag Educational TV Out of Its Ivory Tower!" June 26] that does not watch educational TV is admirable. I agree that apathy is probably the biggest problem most people have. Did commercial TV do this to them or is it simply feeding apathy the fuel it wants?

PUTTING A NEW FACE ON HIS CAREER

Fred Gwynne spends more time in the hands of makeup artists than a vain actress does—and here's how he views
the entire procedure

BY RICHARD WARREN LEWIS

At 5:40 on a Tuesday morning the jarring ring of an alarm clock sounded in a rented Hollywood hills ranch house. Half-awake, lantern-jawed actor Fred Gwynne quickly silenced the bell so as not to awaken his wife and two children, and methodically began dressing in an old pair of khaki pants, white sweat socks, blue tennis sneakers, V-neck T-shirt and a white cable-knit sweater he had laid out the night before. Then, as he had done three times a continued week for the past six months, he drove a 1957 sedan he bought for $500 through the early-morning mist to the Universal studios.

His hair still unkempt, Gwynne lumbered down a long corridor to room 23. He pulled off his sweater, changed into a barber's smock and stretched his lanky frame into an adjustable chair, planting his flamingo legs on a counter in front of him. Makeup man Karl Silvera started to apply balloon rubber to his unshaven face, and mortician's wax to his eyebrows. The tedious, two-hour process that transforms Gwynne into Herman Munster, of the CBS comedy hit The Munsters, was underway.

His skull is flattened

The top half of a foam latex mask, molded to the shape of Gwynne's scalp, was carefully fitted into place with tweezers. It flattened the top of his skull and dropped down in a hump over his eyebrows, giving him a Neanderthal look. Pairs of rubber bolts and washers were fastened on either side of his neck. Silvera rubbed dollops of battleship-gray rubber grease across his cheeks, nose, chin and neck, drying it all with an electric blower.

A waiter arrived with a tray of coffee, two hard-boiled eggs and shredded wheat, which Gwynne crumpled in his fingers and dropped into a bowl. "The only problem," he said, "is I usually itch around lunchtime, especially in my nostrils. The most delightful thing is blowing my nose at the end of the day."

Silvera meticulously powdered his face and daubed black mascara and eye-liner in the sockets around his blue eyes. A sickening yellowish-green hue was blended on top of the gray. A black pencil outlined his lips. His flat head was crowned with a wig of human hair that hung in a fringe over a simulated gashed forehead. The hair was coated with spray to hold it in place. A second makeup man employed a black marking pen to affix scars and stitches to his hands and wrists. A manicure with black nail polish ended the amazing metamorphosis. Gwynne grabbed his script and padded toward the set in his sneakers.

The transformation of his rail-thin, 6-foot-5, 180-pound physique was completed in a tiny, portable dressing room. Swede Munden, who served as Clark Gable's dresser for 10 years, helped him into a pair of trousers swollen with foam-rubber padding in the legs. Gwynne tugged on a pair of leather boots weighing 10 pounds and elevated with 5-inch, built-in heels, which give him an eerie, robot lurch while walking. A shrunken jacket, padded with foam rubber in the shoulders and arms, was buttoned from behind. Its shortened sleeves left his scarred wrists exposed.

"For the first three weeks," says Gwynne, "my back, everything hurt. My body was not used to the costume, and the high-heeled boots stretched my tendons. I could hardly walk at the end of a day."

The suffocating foam rubber caused Gwynne to lose 10 pounds. On the back of the Munsters call sheet, which daily lists required props and other paraphernalia, a note was appended, reading: LEMONADE AND SALT TABLETS FOR MR. GWYNNE. "I had the salt tablets for a while because I was sweating so much," Gwynne says. "Maybe they helped me over the first week or two. When I'm really sweating, I get so dry that I drink about a gallon of water. Water isn't that enjoyable and I can't drink vodka on the set, so I settled on lemonade without sugar."

The producers rented a compressed-air tank to relieve the discomfort of Gwynne's heavy wardrobe. Now, at the conclusion of strenuous scenes, a stagehand pokes its nozzle inside the neck of the costume and releases cool air. "I was just fighting for breath," Gwynne says. "I still find my energy level is pretty far down."

At the suggestion of co-star Al Lewis, Gwynne hired a masseur (who also works for film-star Julie Andrews) to make weekly visits to his home. "I never had a rubdown before," the 39-year-old actor says. "I was so tight the first time he massaged me I just felt like dancing afterwards. I felt absolutely fantastic."

Spared personal appearances

The unusual rigors of his role have freed Gwynne from making most of the monotonous personal appearances ordinarily logged by actors plugging a new show. Only twice has he impersonated Herman Munster in public view. Last Thanksgiving Day, he and Lewis reclined in the back of the show's black, $20,000 Munster Koach as it rolled down Manhattan streets in Macy's annual parade. Much to Gwynne's chagrin, this was his fourth Macy's parade in succession. But this time he came properly fortified for the chill and the children. He waved to throngs on both sides of Broadway with one hand while taking replenishing slugs from a bottle of whisky concealed in a paper bag that he clutched in his other hand. "I had to get bombed so I could say hello to the little kiddies for 40 blocks," he explains. "By the time I got to Macy's at 34th Street, I wanted to adopt every child. That was my last parade. Four years is too much."

Gwynne had selected The Munsters from one of three pilot shows offered him late in 1963. "I sort of smelled something that I liked," he says. "There was some sort of fascination when I read the script and knew that I would be different, even physically. I like the point of view, a little bit of the satire of the old movie monsters.

There was an element of parody in the early episodes which ended when the original writers left. Now it's more one-line, which I don't agree with. Situation comedy. Formula. But I really can't complain. When you do business, you do it for as much money as you can get. When you do art, the money is not that important."

Gwynne had never before worked as a mercenary in dollar-conscious Hollywood. "It was rather strange, after being in New York all those years," he explains. "After making myself up for so long, suddenly I had my private makeup man and a fancy private dressing room. It was like Alice in Wonderland. I sensed an aura of what Hollywood used to be."

Gwynne is still overwhelmed by his proximity to film idols. He admits having to adjust to the idea of eating alongside Jimmy Stewart in the Universal commissary. Following an appearance on The

Bonnie's GAY WITH MIDOL

Danny Kaye Show, he was invited for supper at Kaye's home. Kaye himself cooked a Chinese meal. Watching a hero do his own cooking confused Gwynne, but not as much as another moment at a Hollywood event a month later. "Groucho Marx walked into the room," Gwynne recalls. "It was just too much for me. I couldn't accept that we'd ever be in the same room. I couldn't even speak to him."

Although Gwynne lives in California, he still leases a $100-a-month rent-controlled Manhattan apartment on 85th Street and Broadway. It houses many of his own paintings and wood sculptures. "That apartment," he says, "sort of gives me the feeling that I have one little root."

Gwynne moved to New York in 1953, fresh out of Harvard University, with a choice of two careers: Some of his cartoons in the Harvard Lampoon had been reprinted in Flair magazine, but he also had been a member of the Hasty Pudding Society and later part of the Cambridge Brattle Theatre, where he acted in Shakespearean productions.

It was during his attendance 10 years before at Groton, the same exclusive prep school that graduated Franklin Delano Roosevelt, that Gwynne first tried acting. He had a speech affliction and thought dramatics would help. "I tried out and didn't make it the first year," he recalls. "I think that's why I've always wanted to go into acting, because I didn't make it when I wanted to." A year later, at age 13, he was finally accepted in the dramatic society. But to this day he occasionally stammers.

While trying to make it as an actor in New York, he took a job as a copywriter at the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency to support himself. For five years, he wrote newspaper, magazine, radio and television blurbs for the Ford Motor Company. At one point, he brainstormed a nation-wide campaign consisting of full-page advertisements which would have read: "Ford Is Not Advertising This Year," and nothing more. Gwynne reasoned that with the savings in ad costs, Ford could cut the price of its cars. The plan was rejected.

Moonlighting on TV

His understanding J. Walter Thompson boss, however, did sanction Gwynne's moonlighting on TV. His schedule was juggled so he could perform on weekends, at vacation time, on accumulated sick leave and even during working hours if agency chores were finished. "I told my agent how many times I could do a TV show during a year, and she hit me like clockwork," Gwynne recalls.

One day, in 1960, Gwynne decided there were no more Fords in his future. A children's book that he had written and illustrated, "Best in Show," had been published in hard cover. His canvases were being acclaimed at Westchester County art shows. The day he resigned, to devote full time to painting, Gwynne was cleaning out his office when his agent called with news that he had won a major part in the Broadway musical "Irma la Douce." From that day, his acting career burgeoned and his artistic ambitions faded.

A year later, he had emerged as the permissive patrolman, Francis Muldoon, in television's Car 54, Where Are You? Then came The Munsters, which brought Gwynne a sort of immortality through dozens of merchandising gimmicks conceived by Universal executives. They report enormous sales of 6-inch-high Herman Munster hand puppets, Herman Munster dashboard dolls, child-size Munster Koaches, even ball-point pens with Herman's face on their clips. One of the best sellers is a $10 talking Herman doll. By pulling a string in the doll's back, children can hear Gwynne recite such nifty one-liners as: "You must come over and meet my mummy."

"I supposedly have a royalty arrangement on the dolls," he says. "But I had a royalty on Car 54, too. I got a check recently for 27 cents."

Following a long day's shooting recently, Gwynne stood before a dressing-room mirror and dramatically tore off the disguise that will likely remain his hallmark for many years. He hunched over a washbasin and removed the layers of makeup. "Even though I talk about the makeup and swear about being in the chair for so long, I like the fact of wearing it," Gwynne said, toweling off his face. "Maybe it's just as simple as a little girl putting things on her face. Once the makeup is on, you're already playing a role. You don't have to fight much to get into it."

He pulled on his cable-knit sweater and turned for the door, his shoulders slumped with fatigue. "My biggest problem these days is fighting the boredom," he said. "A performer tends to get slightly bored, once the character is set. I keep thinking of things to do to stay alert. I'm looking forward to the day when I can make up my makeup man."

THE KING FAMILY AND

And William King Driggs took unto him a wife and her name was Pearl Mortensen.

And they begat Karleton and William King II, sons; and they begat Maxine and Luise and Alyce and Donna and Yvonne and Marilyn, daughters. And the daughters of Driggs took his middle name and became The King Sisters, singers to the world.

And the sons and daughters of Driggs took husbands and wives and also begat until there was a family of some 40 members. Which is pretty good begetting.

"The nice thing is that they are all good," "Daddy" Driggs told me a few weeks before he died, at 79, this past April. "There's not a derelict among them."

Nowadays, up to 35 of them (Mother Pearl is ill, two boys are on Mormon missionary tours and a third elected to skip the show) appear as The King Family every Saturday night on the ABC network. Before the show, they hold a little prayer meeting.

The family is tightly knit, a little wacky at times, always self-sufficient. A more-or-less typical evening followed the first all-family show they gave in Oakland, Cal., for the Lafayette-Orinda Mormon Church.

HOW IT GREW

By Robert de Roos

The show had been a ringing success and the family was reliving the triumph at the Orinda home of Yvonne and Del Courtney. As usual, there was singing and laughing.

At midnight someone distributed banjos and clarinets and other instruments and the family lined up behind Del and Yvonne for a game of musical follow-the-leader, to the tune of "When the Saints Go Marching In."

They stomped through the living room, around the dining-room table, out the front door and across the lawn. Suddenly inspired, Del and Yvonne strode down the steps and into the pool. And all the saints went marching in, tootling and strumming and plinking as they plunked.

"Even the little kids got out of bed and jumped in," Tina Cole, Yvonne's daughter, remembers happily. "We had on black velvet dresses with white lace and the black ran into the white. But we were all laughing so hard it didn't matter."

Be it noted that no intoxicants are served at King Family gatherings. The march into the pool was only a typical example of the continued clan letting off a little steam.

The family's exuberance, never very far below the surface, bubbled particularly that night because it was the first time they had been together for a long time.

"When Vonnie asked us to come up and give a show, we thought it was a terrible idea," says Alyce Clarke. "But then we thought, 'Maybe Vonnie's homesick, poor thing. Let's do the show, and we can have three days of fun and cheer up Vonnie, too.'"

The show was so successful that when Donna Conkling's church in Burbank, Cal., asked her to help raise money, she issued another call for the family troupe. "This time it was more than just church people," Alyce said. "We invited our professional friends and we had a more sophisticated audience." They stood and cheered when the show was over, and not a few had tears in their eyes.

"Some of them urged us to 'do something' with the show," Del Courtney recalled, "but it was just a fun thing and we thought it was all over after Burbank." But word of the performance got to Brigham Young University in Utah and the family was asked to give "one more time."

'I thought we'd bomb'

"That's when I thought we'd bomb," Courtney said. "College kids are pretty hip and we didn't know how they would take us." It was the same story: What had wowed them in Oakland and Burbank slaughtered the college kids in Provo.

Unexpectedly, the television class at the university put the whole show on tape and delivered it to Yvonne. Without that tape, the King Family probably would have stayed on the Mormon circuit and never ventured near television. But with the tape . . .

"We heard Henry Kaiser might be interested," says Courtney, "so we submitted it through an advertising agency. Then ABC heard about it and we got an agent and, not quite as fast as all that, here we are."

Where they are is right back where they started—at least the core group—more than 30 years ago. In those days, as the Driggs Family of Entertainers, they barnstormed throughout the West as a wildcat vaudeville act.

How it all began

"We had a family orchestra," said William King Driggs. "Karleton played the clarinet, the girls played the piano and violins and Mama played the cello. I had a saxophone and, of course, we all sang.

"Luise was put through a strenuous course of dancing. Maxine, the oldest girl, learned the violin, and I taught the others the piano and how to sing. Alyce was trained in elocution.

"Yvonne was just a tiny tot when we started going out," he said. "We didn't use her, and Marilyn and Bill weren't born then."

"Daddy was such an education during our childhood," says Yvonne. "We always knew that Daddy knew more than anyone else in the world. If we asked a question he always knew the answer. In spite of the gypsy life we led, we never missed school. When the time came, we'd stop in whatever town we were and go to school.

"We always had security in ourselves because we knew our parents loved us and we loved each other."

"We were always camping out and having picnics," said Alyce. "Father would come in at 4 in the afternoon and say, 'Let's go to the mountains' and we'd all scurry around and pack the food and get blankets and start."

The family was stranded in Oakland during the Depression. That is when The King Sisters were born. Maxine, Alyce and Luise, accompanied by Karleton, sang on the radio as The King Sisters and a Brother. When the girls signed with Horace Heidt, Karleton dropped out.

"We were with Heidt five years and Mother and Daddy and the rest of the kids would join us for the summer," Alyce recalls. "Daddy would write us almost every day. He always wrote out the Sunday-school lessons for us."

While the sisters were with Heidt, Maxine retired. She was replaced by Yvonne and Donna. And when Donna retired, Marilyn took her place.

The process still goes on. Says Yvonne, "Two years ago at Harrah's, Luise had a health scare, and Liza Rey—that's Luise's daughter—said she could take her part. She'd never sung with us and never rehearsed with us but she knew the part right down to our gestures. The next night Marilyn couldn't sing and Liza took her part."

During the late Thirties and the early Forties The King Sisters were as successful as it is possible to be, but after the war they retired. "Our homes and marriages have always come first with us," Yvonne says. "We have turned down fabulous offers so we could be at home."

They were hooked again

But they could not stay retired. NBC offered them a local TV series, and they reorganized, with Marilyn replacing Donna, who had moved to New York. Their recordings were so successful that they found themselves hooked again.

But the final break-up was achieved in 1964. Luise and Alvino Rey had built a home at Camarillo, Cal. Vonnie was living in northern California and Marilyn was off on her own with a night-club act. The King Sisters were no more.

Then came the television show.

"I wasn't much for it," says Alvino Rey, "and Luise has been trying to get out of the business for years."

Luise spoke up, "I wanted to have a little fun. I wanted to play golf and I've always wanted to be in the PTA and things like that."

"I don't think any of the husbands were too happy about the whole thing," Alvino said. "It kind of messes up their family life."

With such reluctance, how did it come about? "Well," says Alvino, "the family sort of runs the family."

Alyce says: "I believe it was meant to be—something that we didn't have too much control over. I think we were meant to be an example to others—as a family."

The teen-agers and tots of the family—"The Cousins"—have been the big surprise of the King Family.

"We didn't know how talented they were," says Alvino Rey. "We never thought of pushing them into the business, but all their talent is coming out on the show."

Lunch with the cousins

I had lunch with a dozen or so of the cousins one day and a brighter bunch of cats you'll seldom see. "We are all best friends," said Liza Rey. "Until Vonnie moved away we all lived within 20 miles of each other. We all go to the same church and do the same things."

"Remember when the Conklings came back from New York?" asked Cathy Cole and everyone grinned.

"We all dressed up like pioneers and Indians and went out to greet them," Cathy said. "We were hollering and whooping like they did in the old days in the West."

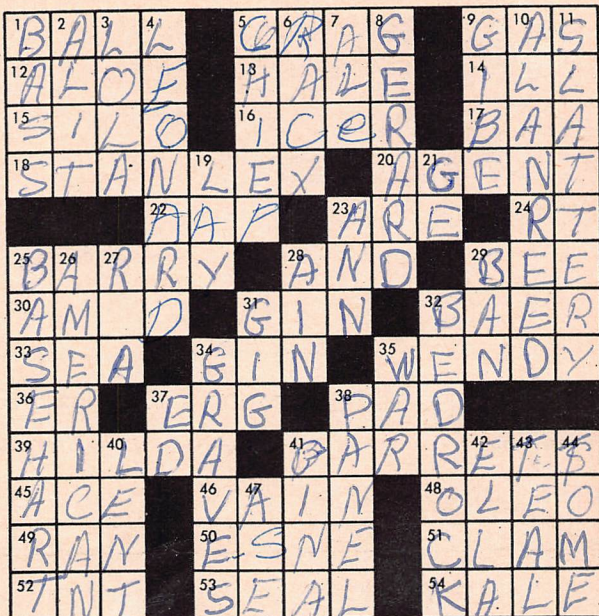

"The Conklings had a lavender car and they all had on lavender clothes to match and had dyed their hair lavender too. We had swimming races, ate dinner and sang and then camped out on the lawn all night."

The youngsters, to a man, are hipped about the family show. As Tina Cole pointed out, "Where else could we work with people we love?"

Until now, these distinguished tobaccos were never offered to cigarette smokers.

Today, a master blend of the world's five great pipe tobaccos is available in a filter cigarette.

Masterpiece cigarettes have briar tips. They come in unique briar-grain packages.

And their distinctive flavor explains why they cost a bit more.
